

Alleged C.I.A. Agent Killed By Firing Squad in Havana

HAVANA, Jan. 21 (Reuters)—An alleged Central Intelligence Agency agent, held responsible for the deaths of 44 Cubans drowned last October while trying to flee the country, was executed by a firing squad last night.

Enrique Gonzalez Rodriguez, known as El Flaco (the Thin Man), was captain and sole survivor of a boat that sank in the Straits of Florida during a hurricane.

The Cuban authorities said Jan. 5 they had captured Mr. Gonzalez Rodriguez, 32 years old, and three other exiles as they landed on the north coast to take a group to Miami illegally.

The three others were given unspecified prison terms. A fourth man was killed when the rest were captured.
